Washington, Nov. 22. The experiment of paying off the enlisted men of the army weekly has been pronounced a failure. The test was conducted for three months with troops at Washington Barracks. Fort Myer and Fort Sam Houston, Texas. Army officers are now firmly convinced that it is a mistake to pay soldiers once a week. It has been discovered that the men who were able to get their pay whenever they wanted it were no better off than when they received it less frequently and in larger amounts.
